By David Andelman

BELGRADE, Aug. 21 (NYT) -Chinese Communist Party Chairman Hun Kuo-leng arrived this morning to a bear hug from President Tito, opening the second leg of his extraordinary three-nation East European and Middle Eastern

The welcome and, indeed, the enure itinerary, kept secret until late last night, was carefully calculated for its political and diplomatic im-pact on both East and West — but particularly on the Soviet Union, which is watching the progress of the Chinese leader with growing anxiety and irritation.

The arrival took place on the morning of the 10th anniversary of the Soviet invasion of Czecboslovakia — an intentional gesture requested, diplomats said, by the Chinese and readily agreed to by the Yugoslavs as a demonstration of the "alternative roads" to socialism represented by the two coun-

At a state banquet, Chairman Hua delivered his sharpest attack during his East European tour on the policies of the Soviet Union. Three times he attacked the concept of "hegemonism," a word used by the Chinese for aggressive Soviet arms race and preparations for

A sparse crowd of several thousand greeted the Chinese leader as he stepped from a Boeing 707 after the one-hour flight from Bucharest, and on the 20-minute ride downtown to the White Palace, where President Tito awaited him while pacing on the red Oriental carpeting laid for the ceremony.

Contrast to Romania

The hrevity and restraint of the welcome in Yugoslavia were a marked contrast to neighboring Romania, where more than 100,000 turned out for an effusive outpour-review, shunning the cane he had ing of chants, dances, embraces and banners. Relations between China and Yugoslavia began to thaw considerably after the death of Mr. Mao and the emergence of Mr. Hua. House Unit Passes Bill for Americans Abroad

Panel Backs Easing of Overseas Voting

By Robert C. Siner

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 (1HT)
—A House committee has adopted a bill that would enable Americans overseas to participate in national elections without incurring local, state or federal tax liability solely because they exercised their consututional right to register and vote.

Acting late last week, the House Administration Committee accepted with only minor changes a measure passed by the Senate in May of last year amending the Voting Rights Act of 1975. The 1975 law gave Americans abroad the right to register for absentee ballots in the states in which they were last domi-

The measure also would change the 1975 act to:

• Extend the right to vote by abmembers of the armed forces in active service and their spouses and dependents, and members of the U.S. merchant marine and their spouses and dependents. These categories were not covered by the 1975 law.

• Recommend that a uniform system of registration be adopted

 Broaden the requirement that overseas citizens must show a valid U.S. passport or State Department identity card to register and to vote. The rule would be revised to include any identification applicable to state or local election requirements.

 Direct that appropriate postal and state election officials be notified of the expedited mail delivery of ballot material.

The House committee amended Senate language that would have given the Defense Department sole responsibility for collecting and disseminating absentee vote information to citizens overseas and ptuviding free postage for absentee registration. Instead, the Defense Department would be responsible only for military personnel and the State Department would disseminate voter information to U.S. civil-

In addition, hundreds of overseas voters who did register either did not receive their ballots or received them too late to cast valid

Provocateurs Blamed

Gen. Razmi said that "anti-re-form radicals" splashed gasoline around the outside of the theater and set it aflame. He named no particular group, but said that "provocative elements, and those ho wear different masks to fight the Iranian revolution, were responsible."

Other theater fires in recent weeks have been blamed on Islamic fanatics who oppose the shah's re-forms and demand that all public entertainment be closed during the current boly period of Ramadan. Since Ramadan began on Aug. 8, bomb or arson attacks have been made on movie houses, restaurants, nightclubs, banks and private and public buildings.

The police chief said that several of those arrested were carrying explosives when they were picked up. He said that two employees of the movie house were among the suspects, and the owner was arrested for negligence, because he did not heed police instructions to hire more attendants and guards.

All the country's major religious leaders except one condemned the massacre. The silent exception was Moslem leader Ayatullah Khomaini, an exile in Iraq since 1963. He fled the country after campaigning against the shah's land-reform program because it provided for the sale or lease to peasants of the vast lands beld by the mosques. His supporters bave carried on an anti-shah campaign which in the last eight months has become increasingly violent and in which about 100 persons have been killed.

Doors Were Locked

Police said that the doors to the theater had been locked as a pro-tection against terrorists, and most of those inside were trapped. A sur-vivor said that many of the victims were trampled to death.

The fire broke out "oo all sides of the hall," said Gbolam-Hussein Nemayandeh, 20. "People cried and jumped over each other as they attempted in vain to escape." He escaped through a roof exit.

Gen. Razmi said that, because of the fire and smoke, the firemen for some time could not get within 100 yards of the building or locate the entrance. They finally were able to knock out a wall "but only to pull out the carbonized bodies."

Radio Tehran announced a period of national mourning. All theaters in the country were closed yesterday. All businesses in Aba-dan, a city of 335,000 at the head of the Gulf, were closed today as relatives and friends of the dead attended funerals or memorial ser-

ROME Aug. 21 (Reuters) — Thousands of Italian railroad workers went on strike tonight for 24 bours, delaying services through-out the country and leaving many vacationers stranded.

Police Reportedly on Alert

Anniversary of Invasion Passes Quietly in Prague

VIENNA, Aug. 21 (AP) — Prague was quiet today on the an-niversary of the Soviet invasion 10 years ago, reports from the Czechoslovak capital said.

Police reportedly were put on full-scale alert to prevent demon-strations and rallies. There were no signs that residents were marking the anniversary of the intervencion, which ended the liberalizing Communist movement known as the "Prague Spring."

[Renters reported that students in Prague staged a silent vigil around a statue of their patron Saint Wenceslaus. A small batch of flowers was placed at the foot of the statue in Wenceslaus Square — a focal point of clashes in 1969 on the first anniversary of the invasion.]

An Austrian radio report from Prague said that police were out in strength, especially in Wenceslaus Square, but that they were courteous and apparently were trying to avoid incidents. The Austrian reporter said that police were especially watching gatherings of youths.

He said that only the most trust-ed Communists were on duty in the news media, and that less-trusted employees were given the day off.

Czecb dissidents who arrived here a few days ago said that they knew of no plans for demonstra-tions in their country. They said that some persons might com-memorate the anniversary by staying away from restaurants and places of entertainment.

Europe Demonstrations

PARIS, Aug. 21 (IHT) — Protests were held around Europe to-day on the 10th anniversary of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia. In Paris, about 900 persons dem-

In London, it was estimated that 4,000 protesters gathered at Trafal-gar Square, led by Soviet dissident Vladimir Boukovski. Several British parliamentarians also were in the crowd.
In Oslo, it was estimated that 10,000 persons assembled. In Rome, Czechoslovak diplo-mats called the police here today to clear their embassy of a group of extreme leftists who demanded to see the ambassador to protest the Soviet presence in Czechoslovakia.

The youths, in groups of two and three, entered the visa section of the embassy in a suburban Rome district, police said.

ECU. The ECU, backed by gold and dollars, would exist at first only as an accounting tool, but it is expected to be the forerunner of European money.

A similar unit, called the "European Unit of Account," is now used by the Common Market's central organizations to list budgets and other statistics. The EUA, whose value is computed daily on the basis of a "basket" of European currencies, has proved far more stable than individual nations' sys-

In the case of the ECU, officials believe that coins and bills representing gold and dollar-backed ECUs eventually could be issued publicly and used as a Europewide currency. The ECUs could either replace existing national units of money or co-exist with them for the convenience of international travelers and businessmen.

The European League for Economic Cooperation has already suggested a new name for the ECU if it comes into general circulation: "the Europa," which it hopes can exist by 1980.

For now, though, just setting up the system of pooled money reserves and defining the ECU's exact value are causing enough difficulties for the experts.

A major block is that some econ-omists believe that any European mocetary union is impossible until inflation and balance-of-payments rates are brought closer together among countries. They are sharply different oow. Macedonian capital of Skoplje is being viewed by Soviet officials as a provocation. A long and bitter verbal battle has been building for months between Yugoslavia and neighboring Bulgaria, a Soviet cli-ent state, over Macedonian territorial and minority questions.

The Macedonian question is only one of a series of difficult Balkan diplomatic issues that began boil-ing with the break between Albania and China early this summer. The prospects of the visit by Mr. Hua to Yugoslavia, which Albania has long feared and hated certainly ac-celerated this break. Some diplomais have speculated that the huge reception planned for the Chinese in Romania and Yugoslavia is like ly to drive Albania even further toward the Soviet Union, with whom it broke more than 20 years

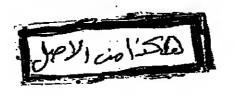

The Chinese leader, in deference to his bosts, is showing remarkable restraint in discussing any of these sensitive areas.

This morning, the Yugoslav Communist Party newspaper Borba, in a front-page lead commentary on the visit, observed that the two countries had agreed that "the development of mutual relations" development of mutual relations not be done at the expense of other countries regardless of whether they are small or big."

Sull, senior Yugoslav diplomats, in background talks with Western newsmen, bave said that there are a number of nonirritant issues that number of nonirritant issues that can and will be discussed. There is for instance, the question of Chinese support for the concept of nonalignment, which has been carral to Yugoslav diplomacy since Marshal Tito helped form the nonaligned movement 20 years ago. At the same time, there is Yugo-slavia's support for Mr. Hua's cless intentions to move China toward more central role among the major powers — a move that Yugoslavi is encouraging as yet another di-luent to the power of the Soviel Union and the United States.

Finally, there is China's fascing tion with Yugoslavia's concept of economic organization called "worker self-management," which Mr. Hun is understood to be ans ious to apply on test scales in several Chinese rural and industrial enterprises.

Lisbon Crisis: A Soares-Eanes Contest

By James Markham

MADRID, Aug. 21 (NYT) — Portugal's festering governmental crisis, arising from the collapse last month of Mario Soares' Socialistled coalidon, reflects a far deeper institutional clash between president and premier in the nation's young democracy.

It appears, from a variety of Portuguese informants, that Alfredo ta, an independent with no parliamentary base, since the Socialists industrialist assentiated and the constitution of th industrialist named premier-designate by Presideot Antonio Ramaiho Eanes, will succeed shorttary underpinnings will be shaky and its future uncertain. "I think the intention of the people going into this government will be to prove that it is more than a caretaker government," said a well-placed Lisboo editor.

But the contest between Gen. Salt the Contest between Cent.

Eanes, a soft-spoken, methodical soldier, and Mr. Soares, an effusive, outspoken politician, has only begun and will probably be played out in general elections next year. The institutional confrootation involves two men of differing philo-sophies — the premier, an ideologi-cally grounded, moderate Socialist, and the president, a man increasingly inclined to give free enterprise its head to pull the country out of deep economic difficulties.

Portugal's Constitution. just after the overthrow of the Salazarist dictatorship in 1974, gives both president and premier considerable powers. The premier is charged with running affairs of government through his Cabinet; the president, who is popularly elected, appoints and dismisses the premier and is commander of the armed forces. Gen. Eanes sacked Mr. Soares after the premier's rightist Center-

The workers at the Perry-Norvell plant said that they were overcome by toxic fumes from a new batch of glue. But federal researchers recenty said that the workers were victims of assembly-line hysteria.

A 14-page report compiled by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health concluded that the fainting and dizziness were the result of hyperventilation— overly fast breathing stemming from fear. And, the report added. the sickness was more severe among those workers most dissatisfied with their jobs.

Bunk, Union Says

Union officials at the plant termed the report a lot of bunk. They said unsafe working conditions, not fear, caused the workers to be overcome. Plant officials would not comment.

The workers began fainling the afternoon of Nov. 4, when four were overcome. Four more complained of dizziness and nausea the next day. A total of 48 employees were treated at local hospitals on four consecutive workdays. The plant was soon closed and federal researchers investigated.

They examined the glue, took air samples and interviewed the workers. Their report states that the outbreak stemmed from mass psychogenic illness, also known as assem-bly-line hysteria, collective delusion and hysterical contagion.

"As best we're able to determine, that's the only logical explanation," said Dr. Mitchell Singal, the NIOSH medical officer who coor-dinated the investigation. The cir-

Scientists Tell Of First Storage Of Antimatter

GENEVA. Aug. 21 (APt — For the first time, physicists have suc-ceeded in storing antimatter, the European nuclear research organi-zation CERN announced today. It said that one of the 12-nation group's research teams created several hundred antiprotons and kept them circulating in a magnetic ring for 85 hours. The successful experiment give new indications of the possible life-time of antimatter and opens the way for new research into elementary particle physics in the early 1980s, the announcement said.

A subject toyed with in science fiction, antimatter in a sense is a mirror image of all matter, differ-ing from it only in electric charge and magnetism. Belief in its existence was confirmed first by the discovery in 1955 of the antiproton. The antiproton has the same characteristics as the proton, the particle present in all matter, but the proton has a positive electric charge and the antiproton's charge is negative.

CERN said that a fundamental principle of nuclear science, demanding that proton and antiproton have the same lifespan, has been clashing with the fact that the universe does not consist equally of matter and antimatter, hut predominantly of matter.

Hashish Supports a Valley of Lebanese

By Marvine Howe

YANABIH MARJIM, Lebanon (NYT) — They say this is the most savage corner of Mount Lebanon, where some villages cannot be reached by road, where people still live in round stone huts with pointed roofs, where a man's honor is more precious than his life.

But there are signs of new times even bere in Yanabih Marjim, which means loosely "the people's pasture." It is no longer devoted to grazing but to Lebanon's principal cash crop, hashish. Surrounded by arid, othre peaks, this broad valley floor is covered by rich green narcooe plants that look like little cedars. "There's so much hash in the region that bunting dogs get dizzy and can't smell the birds," a Lebanese quail hunter a Lebanese quail hunter complained.

The Topsy-Turvy World

When the British surrendered at Yorktown to the French and rebellious colonists, their hands played, most appropriately, "The World Turned Upside Down," One can hear echoes of that old march today, as the Federal Reserve acts to prop a falling dollar, and as Chairman Hua, of one Communist Republic, wanders through two other Communist republics to muffled cries of rage from the Soviet Union. Who would have thought, when the money men of the nearly victorious Allies, met in New Hampshire's White Mountains a little more than 30 years ago, that the dollar would ever need propping? Or who, among the divided Allies in the late 1940s, would have guessed that one day the Stalinist empire would be mocked by some of its members?

Much that was assumed when World War Il ended has been overturned. The hopes of close and constant global cooperation among the victors were the first to go -- but for what it is worth, many of the fears that replaced those hopes are also shaken.

Yet the very speed with which the facts of 1945 became the myths of 1978 has its own lesson. Many of the phenomena studied in the world's chanceries and marketplaces today could change quickly, or be misinterpreted. The stream of history has reached flood stage in the 20th century - consider the transformations that took place between the armistices of 1918 and the renewal of global war less than 21 years later.

For instance, the dollar, whatever it sells for in yen, marks or francs, is still the currency of a land rich in natural and technological resources. More, it has already contributed much to the economic miracles that have renewed Western Europe and Japan. There are political and economic problems within the United States -- but they are minuscule next to those that so much of Europe knew when the war ended, and that so much of Asia and Africa still confront. The dollar is no longer almighty, but it is far from dead.

The same can be said of world Communism. It does not harken to every whisper from the Kremlin, not even in those lands where, just 10 years ago, Czechoslovakia was made to bend before the Soviet Union and other Warsaw Pact (except Romanian) tanks. The example of Yugoslavia's heresy is popular. Many Communist nations emphasize nationality over international Marxism; so do many Communist parties in non-Communist

This has greatly reduced the power of Moscow to send satellite armies marching to a single drum. The acute frictions hetween China and the Soviet Union, as well as between a number of Asian Communist states, reduce simplistic fears of a major military operation moving in a straight line from the Far Left against the Center and Right. But the power of Communism, as a political reality, persists, whether it looks to Moscow, Peking, or some new version of the old Marxist-Leninist dogma.

And over the tangle hangs the threat of a kind of war - nuclear war - that could wreak more havoc than this century's global conflicts combined. So one of the threads of hope that can sustain the world's peoples is that this peril is at least recognized by those who hold the greatest nuclear power; that efforts are being made to contain the danger. For the hard fact is that nuclear bombs homhs that stand ready now in missiles that can blanket the earth — could do more to turn the world, literally, upside down than all the diplomats, the soldiers, the politicians, the fanatics, who have affected human destiny in this stormy generation.

the fall of the dollar's value on the world's currency markets has suddenly become much more dangerous. It was urgent that the Carter administration and the Federal Re-serve Board respond. The Fed has increased its discount rate - the rate at which it lends to commercial banks -- by half a percentage point. That's a necessary remedy, hut it's not sufficient. What comes next?

Over the winter and spring, the administration's posture of benign neglect of the exchange rates was perfectly reasonable. Most of the movement was modest. The principal exception was the rise of the yen, resulting from Japan's huge and persistent trade surpluses. But since the heginning of July. things have changed sharply for the worse. Now the dollar is falling against most of the showed an inflation rate of over 10 percent a world's major currencies, the weak as well as the strong. The reason for this ominous change is a spreading impression, among currency traders and bankers, that the U.S. government either can't or won't reduce the level of inflation in the United States.

Exchange rates are swayed hy people who have to gamble on the values of currencies months and years ahead. If they think that the dollar is going to depreciate faster than other kinds of money, they sell - and the prediction quickly tends to become self-fulfilling. When people self dollars, the exchange rates fall. That increases inflation in two ways. Imports into the United States hecome more expensive and some of the domestic industries - steel, for example happily raise their own prices as the competing foreign products get more expensive. At the same time, American goods become cheaper to foreign buyers, who hid up prices for Americans. Inflation and exchange rates are not separate issues.

How do the financial markets make up their collective minds about American intentions? The last two months provide a good illustration. At the end of June, the Secretary of the Treasury, Michael Blumenthal, said at the National Press Club that the Federal Reserve Board's high interest rates were forcing the administration to lower its estimates for economic growth. On the same day the Fed voted to raise the discount rate by a quarter of I percent. But it was a split vote, and the

The rise in interest rates Friday was the Fed's new chairman, William Miller, had disright opening move. In the last several weeks, sented. Currency dealers concluded that the administration was putting pressure on the Fed not to interfere with growth, and it had won over Mr. Miller. In July, Mr. Miller seemed to confirm that assessment when he began saying that interest rates would peak soon, he hoped, and begin to decline before the end of the year.

> Meanwhile, the administration's energy program was in endless trouble in Congress. Financial experts, here and abroad, took that as a clear indication that the United States would do nothing about its inordinate imports of oil. They are contributing, of course, to inflation and the weakness of the dollar.

> In late July, the government published the usual statistics on the nation's economic performance in the previous three months. They year. It meant that inflation was rising in the United States while falling in most other major economies. It also meant that the Carter administration had underestimated the speed with which prices were rising. The decline of the dollar began to accelerate.

> Last week Mr. Carter summoned Mr. Blumenthal and Mr. Miller to discuss the dollar. The White House subsequently put out a statement to the effect that they would consider what to do. But, when you say that you will have to consider what to do, you inevitably leave the impression that you have no clear line of action in mind. The currency markets began to bounce around wildly. Then, on Friday, the Fed raised the discount rate again.

> The conventional objection to higher interest rates is that they threaten to choke off husiness expansion and tip the country into a recession. But there is no simple choice between inflation and recession. Inflation at the present level will produce a recession and, to judge from the 1974-75 experience, it can he a recession of great severity.

> To bring down the inflation rate will require further increases in interest rates. It will require firm decisions to hold down oil imports. It will require a federal hudget of great stringency. It is not a pleasant prospect. But if it seems excessively harsh, one need only think for a minute about the alternative.

Rioting in Iran

No state could avoid response to the killing of policemen or to rioting. Nor could the Iranian government be expected to give in to those demands of the religious, which seek the restoration of a half mythical Islamic society. The answer lies in the liberalization that the shah says he is trying to pursue, together with a real movement toward the social justice that is supposedly the inspiration of the White Revolution. It does not lie with Chieftain tanks, for when you move an armored column on one of your own cities you make a confession of abject political failure that cannot be disguised.

That question has gained some urgency in West Germany of late, not to mention that it has caused the government some embarrassing agonizing. Last week it toomed mutely behind that barely noticed and peripherally reported hostage-taking ni the Wesi German consu-tate-general in Chicago.

The backround to that strange drama, for those who may have missed or forgotten the prologue three months ago, is slightly more complex than the ostensible tale of military Crossing separatists trying militant Croatian separatists trying to extort the freedom of one of their bretheren — in this case, on Stepjan Bilandzic, who is in a Cologne jail awating possible exradi-tion to his native Yugoslavia.

It begins, as do many stories around bere, with the Baader-Meinhof terrorist gang, otherwise known as the "Red Army Faction." Last May, four of its alleged members were captured by police in Yugoslavia. Among them were Brigitte Monhaupt and Rolf Clemens Wagner, both suspected of playing a key role in the abduction and subsequent murder of in-dustrial leader Hanns-Martin Schleyer in the fall of 1977.

Industry's Future in Space Age

By Jerome Glenn

WASHINGTON — People of very large, high-purity crystals for electronic systems, and the creation of pure glass, free of containthe dawning industrial space age. Like the wagon trains and railroads of the past, the space sbuttle will' open a new highway to prosperity. Economic development of space by private industry is about to begin.

Early space industrialization (as distinguished from the space colonization outlined by Princeton University Professor Gerard O'Neill) will take materials from earth. process them in space and export products back to earth. Eventually, the moon and nearby asteroids rich in hauxite, iron, titanium and silicone will be mined.

There will also be space business To a large extent the Chinese ac-ons are only a logical foreign poli-will be built in orbit and on the moon, opening up new markets for space transportation, communication, food, shelter and other necessities. Space industrialization will have the advantage of manufacturing for and delivering to these space cities in a gravity-free envi-ronment, avoiding climbing in and out of the earth's gravitational well.

Some Advantages

Space offers industry the advantages of perfect vacuums, zero gravity, solar energy, the elimination of weather-caused corrosion or rust. and the availibility of temperature extremes. Manufacturing in outer space will be easier and far more efficient than similar terrestrial production. For instance, new aloys and composite materials can be made extremely strong, light in weight and temperature-resistant.

With the removal of impurities, vaccines made in space will reduce undesirable side effects. Other processes will include the production and electronic uses. Space vehicle launching costs in 1960 were $10,000 per pound. With the space shuttle, the cost will drop to about $200. It is anticipated that by 1990 the cost could drop to $25. Space accounting, always difficult, is similar to including the costs of aviation research and development and airport construction in the price of plane tickets.

er contamination, for optical, laser,

Investment Factor

People often accuse the U.S. space program of being a waste of money. But according to the Mid-west Research Institute, by 1969, the $25 billion the National Aeronautics and Space Administration had spent on research and develop-ment had returned $52 billion to the U.S economy, with a projected total of $181 billion by 1987. This added wealth is in the form of new products and processes in medi-cine, agriculture, education and consumer items, with additional savings in safety and testing equip-ment. longer-lasting metals and computer designs.

Space is one of the best investments a nation can make. It creates a favorable balance of trade by exporting technology, creating new jobs and increasing the tax base. It even tends 10 reduce inflation; 20 years ago, the office calculator cost $300; now it is $15, portable, and lasts longer.

A, study by Chase Econometric Associates shows that if $12 billion were added to NASA's research and development funds, at $1 billion per year, $144 billion would be added to the economy in 12 years. At that rate, taxes from the new wealth would make space invest-ment profitable for the U.S. government by the ninth year. By the 10th year, it would purportedly add 1.1 million jobs while reducing in-flation by 2 percent.

As long as materials are brought from earth to space for processing, there are no international legal problems. However, since 1974, the United Nations Committee on the Peaceful Uses of Outer Space has been negotiating a treaty to deter-mine if lunar materials can be owned. It has the same complica-tions as the U.N.'s Law of the Sea Conference negotiations for mining the ocean floor.

The knowledge explosion stimulated by space exploration will take industry into many profitable areas, many of them still unimaginable. For example, airlines could eventually order space-sbuttle fleets for space tourism.

Another possibility, one that could get us off the nuclear book, is solar-power satellites. Congress recently passed a bill to study their feasibility. If it can be shown that there is no dangerous environmental impact, these giant solar collec-tors could transmit enough microwave energy to terrestrial electric grids to supply electricity around the world.

Solar Power

On a smaller scale, the individual entrepreneur can book space on a shuttle flight for only $10,000. This opens the door of space industry directly to small businesses for the first time. But so far, the country has been slow to explore the economie rewards to be found above the stratosphere. Great American fortunes were made in shipping. railroads, automobiles, oil and elecrancass, among other things. The next great fortunes may be made in space. Political and scientific pursuits got us up there in the first place, but only dollars and cents are soing to keep by these are going to keep us there.

Jerome Glenn, executive director of Future Options Room, a research or ganization in Washington, D.C., is co-author of the forthcoming "Spoce Trek." He wrote this article for The suspects, after all, are Baader-Meinhof suspects. But conversely, can West Germany afford not to hand over its man? The dilemma is comparable to the one that arises with each hijacking of a Czechoslovak airliner to West German soil - and within the past year there have been three. The bijackers have all been Czecbostovaks seeking to escape that grim and represseive country

Political motivation, be it ever s absurd or patently valid, is a claim they all make: even the Baader-Meinbof members. But can courts of law be expected to make judg-ments on such claims? By what ments on such claims? By yardsuck? Ours or theirs?

West Germany's supreme court in Karlsruhe, at any rate, will soon have to make such a judgment, for that is where Bilandzie's appeal against extratidion currently rests. The hope in Bonn is that the court will absolve the government of a final decision.

But those justices have quite track record for passing the buck.

of back pain by simply removing their wallets from their hip

Dr. Elmar Lutz of St. Mary's Hospital, Passaic, reports on the two cases in a letter in the Aug. 25 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

A 52-year-old salesman complained of having suffered from sciatica for 14 months before Dr. Lutz noticed that he carried a thick wallet in a hip pocket on his painful left side. (Sciatica is pain along the sciatic nerve at the base of the spine. It mani-fests itself with pain in the thighs, lower back, and hips because that nerve transmits messages in the brain from that area.)

The wallet carried by the salesman was an inch and a half thick, filled with credit cards.
Dr. Lutz told him to stop carrying it in his hip pocket. The other patient, n 35-year-old man, complained of having had pain in the right thigh and lower hack for eight years. He also suffered from numbness in the

Fired Employee Cited in Blast on Philippines Jet

MANII.A. Aug. 21 (AP) — Government investigators say they have identified an airport electrician, despondent over losing his job, as the person responsible for a bomh explosion on Friday aboard a Philippine Airlines jet.

Officials said that Rodolfo Salazar, 36, had just been fired at Cebu in the central Philippines, where the flight originated, and had named his wife as the beneficiary of a $5,333 accident insurance policy that he bought at an airport counter on Thursday.

The explosion ripped through the rear lavatory of a BAC-III carrying 84 persons. It wounded three passengers, as well as projecting Mr. Salazar, who apparently was setting the bomb in the toilet, through a hole in the fuselage. The plane was flying at 23,600 feet over the Sibuyan Sea. 120 miles southeast of here.

Police said that Mr. Salazar sold his watch to buy his ticket. He took a seat in the rear, and a woman passenger who sat beside him thought he was drunk. She said that he went to the lavatory moments "before the explosion - and never

Researchers Hunting the Key to Regeneration of Human Cells By Walter Sullivan

NEW YORK, Aug 21 (NYT) —
Cut off the leg of a salamander, newt or axolotl and it will grow another. But amputate a human limb and no such regeneration occurs. It is even possible to generate an entire frog merely by combining the nucleus of a cell from the body of one such animal with the egg cell of another whose nucleus has been destroyed.

According to a Soviet press account, Prof. N. Polezhayev of the Institute of Developmental Biology in Moscow has achieved regeneration of limbs in newly born opposums and rats and has predicted that such restoration may ultimate ly be possible in human beings. U.S. researchers in this area are not willing to dismiss such claims out of hand. They note that the opposum is a relic of an early stage in mammalian evolution and shows some regenerative ability. They are more skeptical of the rat report, although in Britain very young chil-dren have reportedly regrown fingertips, including some joint structure. As with limb regenera-tion in news, this is inhibited if skin or scar tissue covers the wound before regrowth begins.

Some experimenters believe that question of why regeneration occurs under some circumstances and not others may be answered soon. The problem centers on the manner in which genetic informa-tion within the cell nucleus that controls development and function of the body from conception to For many years, he was a fellow of All Souls College, Oxford Uni-versity, and professor of Western death is turned on and off.

He and Dr. Charles Ordahl, now Temple University School in Philadelphia, have found that cells destined to evolve into a leg can be identified early in an embryo's development when, only a few cell divisions earlier, they could have become either heart or limb tissue. Chemical Seen Upsetting Balance of Marine Life

By Bayard Webster chain is thus believed to possibly decrease the number of food fish

NEW YORK, Aug. 21 (NYT) — PCB, the toxic industrial chemical that is found in most of the world's oceans, lakes and rivers, is now believed to play a hitherto unsuspected and subtle role among the microscopic plants and animals that are a vital part of the marine food

The chemical, polychlorinated biphenyls, is widely used in the produccion of plastics, paints, hy-draulic fluids and insulators. About as nondegradable as its long-lived cousin. DDT, it has been found in most forms of marine life and is known to cause deformities in shore birds and other animals that feed on PCB-contaminated fish and plants. Last year the Environmental Protection Agency banned direct PCB discharges into the nation's waters, and four months ago Wisconsin closed several of its best fishing rivers after PCB traces were found in fish in them.

The latest finding indicates that PCB concentrations are damaging or fatal to the larger types of poyto-plankton, microscopic plants of the algae family. A decrease in their numbers affects the food supply of the zooplankton, the slightly larger herbivorous animals that feed on the tiny plants. The 200plankton, in turn, are normally consumed by tiny fish that are consumed by the size of fish that attract fishermen. The smaller sizes of pbytoplankton, those smaller than nine-mil-lionths of a meter in diameter, however, were relatively unaffected by the PCBs. But many types of zooplankton are selective eaters, often choosing food on the basis of size. shape and species. Thus, if there are not enough large-size plants for those animals that prefer them, the number of predator zooplankton will decrease, affecting the marine

Dr. Caplan, in an interview, said the same effect may explain the decline with advancing years of the ability of muscle to regenerate - a phenomenon some link to the aging

Reserve Information

Furthermore, at least in some organisms, it appears that considerable information is kept in reserve by the nucleus and only rarely printed out. At the University of Denver Medical School it has been found that this is true of about a third of the information units (genes) in nuclei of certain intesti-

A Report on Children Bearing Children

Lacemaking requires patience, and long hours are put in at bome at bobbin or cushion or frame; it is also, for such a skilled craft, woe-fully underpaid. "Our lace workers accept a rate for the job that is far from a fair recompense for results," De Saedeleer said. "They know that if we tried to catch up with today's union rates the business would just fold, and there would be no more lacemaking at all." Demand, be said, "has decreased

Before the takeover, the Cipriani ran in the red even though it offered such attractions as an Olympic-sized swimming pool five min-utes by launch from Harry's Bar and the Piazza San Marco. Sherwood, who operates by delegating to top people without relinquishing extensive final say-so, hired the di-rector of Venice's hitberto No. 1 hotel, gave him a green light on changes, then ran faster himself by engaging Paris decorator Gerard Galle to design a series of bedrooms and baths whose opulence would impress the young international millionaire crowd.

Galle, who understood you don't have to be old to be rich, installed round bathtubs, circular glass-bathroom-walls to be screened off by sliding panels if so desired, beds on platforms, and private terraces con-veniently giving on to the pool for before-breakfast plunges or midnight dips.

The tubs are hell for the staff to clean, but guests are so enamored of the new quarters that they invite other guests on tours of inspection. Helping Sherwood fill the Cipriani with people who will glitter-up the premises is Billy Hamilton, a fork-tongued Irish wit and London publicist, who is on a buddy-buddy basis with the titled, the affluent, and the very bright of two continents. Proposition 5 Seeks to Clear the Air

By William Endicott

BERKELEY, Calif. - Tim Moder led a visitor up the stairs to the second floor of a nondescript two-story bouse, over a stack of clean diapers and into a back room where a baby's playpen sat in one corner.

The room, he said, would offer a quieter place to talk because it was away from the bustle and bustle downstairs, where ringing tele-phones and clacking typewriters marked Moder's house as a command post for a California antismoking coalition that has thrust tobacco into the forefront of state politics by qualifying Proposition 5 for the November general election hallot.

And whether Moder and his colleagues intended it that way or not, the unpretentious, even ramshackle, beadquarters-home clearly Two or three times a year the makes a pnint they would like family opens the bome for group made — that they are merely Davids against the tobacco industry's Goliath.

Essentially, Proposition 5 would outlaw smoking in almost all work-places and enclosed facilities open to the public - with a few specific exemptions — and impose restric-tions on smoking in other places such as restaurants and private offices. Violators would be subject to arrest and a fine. On the one side is the coalition, can Civil Liberties Union otticial and the Democratic State Central Committee.

The word is that the opponents are prepared to spend up to $5 million to defeat the measure. Most of the money is coming from the to-bacco industry, which wants to nip the anti-smoking movement in California before the idea spreads to other states.

Toward that end, California for Common Sense, the umbrella under which opponents are operating has hired a San Francisco campaign management firm, Wood-ward and McDowell to deliver the message and are already on radio and television with their "No on 5" commercials.

In contrast, Californians for Clean Indoor Air have gotten endorsements and taped commercials from such personalities as Charlton Heston and Gregory Peck, but they are still trying to raise enough money to get them on the air.

"We are hoping," campaign manager Dana Alden said, "for a budget of maybe a half million dollars. The biggest single contribution we've gotten so far is $25,000 from the Argentage Care Services. from the American Cancer Society, and that's the first time it's ever dooated to a political campaign. The thrust of the opposition's Woodward and McDowell commercials is that the measure is a hairbrained scheme, "another entry in the ding-dong derby," that it would be expensive to implement and enforce, and that it infringes on personal liberties.

Jack McDowell, a former San Franciso poliocal writer turned campaign consultant, readily concedes that contributions from the tobacco industry are "substantial" — $545,785 as of the last camassue is one of smokers versus nonsmokers. We're not in the business of selling cigarettes or promoting tobacco," he said. "We're in the business of trying to defeat what we and other contributors and endorsers see as very, very, bad law."

'Unreasonable Regulation' The Democratic State Central Committee earlier this month also called for the measure's defeat, saying that it represents "unreasonable government regulation," cost taxpayers "millions of dollars in added police and court costs."

According to a study ordered by Woodward and McDowell and done by Economics Research Associates, the measure would cost local and state taxpayers $43.1 million its first year for signs required at every entrance to a government facility, and for police and court

Texaco Cautious on Gas-Well Test

The second test of Texaco's natural-gas discovery well in the Baltimore Canyon confirms the presence of "significant" gas reserves, but the company em-phasizes that it is still far too early to determine if production there will be economically feasible. The well, about 100 miles off the coast of Atlantic City. N.J., flowed natural gas at the rate of 9.4 million cubic feet a day through a 22-64-inch opening in a test of a 40-foot interval below 13,000 feet. However, a spokesman says that any prior comments by com-pany officials still apply. Texaco officials had said that the Baltimore Canyon discovery was a "good beginning," but that commercial gas reserves exceeding one trillion cubic feet would have to be found to justify production there. That level of reserves, the company said, would correspond to production of about 200 million cubic feet a day from a multiwell drilling platform. Texaco, so far, has said that to determine its reserve potential, it would need to drill at least two more wells in the area, taking from eight months to a year. It could take from seven to 10 years to develop a field there,

Her work was touched by this illumination. touched by this illumination, though she did not regard herself as a teacher. She helped America see the Great Depression through an eloquent gallery of country folk who suffered through it and recorded her most famous series, three photographs of a originant mother holding ber children in a pea-pick-ers camp in Nipomo. Meltzer's biography matches the directness and essential strength of this remarkable and unduly neglected photographer. Dorothea Lange's life is above all that of a professional photographer who went through "hard plugging" to become an artist. The work is not only a biography but to its way an indispensable record of photography in America from the 20s through the 50s. Though less known to the public than such con-temporaries as Margaret Bourke-White. Lange was at the center of those circles which included her teachers and influences — Arnold Geothe, Charles H. South made up his mind to take preemptive action when he picked up the freakish hand shown in the diagram, and the fact that his partoer opened one bear and East overcalled two clubs did not deter him. Most players would treat a jump to three spades as a slam invitation — using it preemptively is a sophisticated modern idea.

West's jump to five clubs was an accurate advance sacrifice, since accurate advance sacrifice, since South would have to make a miraculous underlead of the spade ace to beat the contract three tricks for 800 points. Sutton and Garvey Fight in Clubhouse

NEW YORK, Aug. 21 (AP) - Two Los Angeles Dodgers, pitcher Don Sutton and first baseman Steve Garvey, fought with each other in the dressing room before the game yesterday against New

The altercation was sparked by an article in The Washington Post in which Sutton was quoted as saying: "All you hear about on our team is Steve Garvey, the All-American boy. But Reggie Smith was the real MVP [Most Valuable Player]. We all know it...[Smith] has carried us the last two years. He is not a facade. He does not have the Madison Avenne image."

Sutton and Garvey fought for several minutes before being separated and Sutton came out the worse, with a bruised and swollen

It was just a difference of opinion on the article," said Garvey. "The article was completely unnecessary. We are dedicated to winning the pennant. We are supposed to be winning the pennant, not singling out individuals. The article also included a reference to Garvey's family, which Garvey, who sported a small abrasion above his left eye, "As far as I'm concerned everything is cut and dried and clear." Garvey said he went over to Sutton's locker before game to find out if the pitcher had been quoted accurately.

But that is how the Gershwin brothers worked — however different they were, they were attuned to a remarkable degree.

Come Dec. 6, Ira will be 82 - one of the remaining creators of America's golden age of musicals, including "Oh, Kay!" which is enjoying a revival at the Kennedy Center in

Of Ira's contemporaries, only frving Ber-lin and Cole Porter matched their own words to their own music, and it's generally agreed, as Lehman Engel puts it, that "Ira was their equal" in dreaming up the right words, precise and clear, for George's melodies and rbythms — from 1924 until George's death at 39 in 1937. Before and the state of the since, Ira's words have accompanied the tunes of Harold Arlen, Vernon Duke, Vin-cent Youmans, Jerome Kern, Kurt Weill, Sigmund Romberg, Harry Warren, Burton Lane and E.Y. "Yip" Harburg. To get a sense of his accomplishment, you have to examine the lyrics carefully. Ira

Do, do, do What you've done, done, done Before, Baby. Do, do, do What I do, do, do Adore. Bahy. About a first kiss, be penned: I could cry salty tears; Where have I been all these years?

Tell me now

Little wow,

How long has this been going on?
And, succinctly:
'S Wonderful, 'S Marvelous.
The first, "Do, Do, Do," was in the original "Oh, Kay!" of 1926, and the second, "How Long Has This Been Going On." into been interpolated from "Funny Face" into the current "Oh, Kay!" revival. The third, "S Wonderful," also was written for "Funny Face" of 1927, which Fred Astaire repeated on film 30 years later. These are striking illustrations of the singularly concealed craft of lyric-writing.

Ira Gershwin

With Ira, titles were of primary importance to a song — no matter where the phrase would be placed within the melody. One evening "I told George that maybe we could do something with the sounds of 'do, do' and 'done, done, "At the piano George limned out the rhythm, added a third of the "D" accents and came up with the two dominant notes. The refrain was finished in less than 30 minutes, though the verses for this duet took some days.

The melodic lines of the quoted songs do not end on final D, T, B, K or F, hard consonants that are treacherous to sing. Oscar Hammerstein II was to regret that he had "severely handicapped" a "Carousel" song, "What's the Use of Wood'rin"," by ending the last line with "And all the rest is talk." The hard "K," be explained, makes it impossible for the singer to sustain Richard Rodgers' final note.

And by the simple contraction of "It's Wonderful, It's Marvelous," Ira came up with two fresh words which in some books are spelled as he made them sound -"swonderful," "smarvelous" — though his own spelling is 'S Wonderful, 'S Marvel-

In America, during its first century or so, theater music was dominated by European imports and corny-flowery translations.

Only around World War I did songs begin Only around World War I do songs begin to develop character, but musical show sto-ries, "books," lagged far behind and contin-ued to do so until "Show Boat," "Pal Joey" and "Oklahoma!" revolutionized the U.S. musical stage. The triumph of the Gershwins is that. Porgy and Bess' excepted, their songs have lived on despite books or plots which range from frail to nonexistent.

So it is remarkable that Ira's lyrics still are crisp, sparkling and literate. Not for him the sloppy words and smarmy meanings of the sloppy words and smarmy meanings of today's hardly literate songs. His list includes: "Embraceable You," "I Got Rhythm," "Strike Up the Band," "Let's Take a Walk Around the Block," "Who Cares?" "I Can't Get Started With You," "Love Walked In." "Summertime," "It Ain't Necessarily So," "I Got Plenty o' Nuttin'," "My Ship" and "Jenny." Slangy, yes, but never illiterate.

Of course, Ira had no pretentions to being the poet many consider him to be. The foreword to his book bas a postscript: "Since most of the lyrics in this lodgment were ar-rived at by fitting words mosaically to music already composed, any resemblance to actual poetry, living or dead, is highly improb-

So, it's not surprising that fra stays home these days. He and Lee (for Leonore, whom be married in 1926) live in the Beverly Hills house they remodeled from an old one next door to the first home be, Lee and George bought. It conceals a sparkling garden and pool, tended splendidly by Lee's faithful staff. Lee and Ira prefer a bandful of visitors for their marble balls and circular fireplace to large, formal parties.

Of all the spots in the home Lee so meticulously maintains around him, Ira's upstairs library is his sanctum. His collection, especially of old dictionaries and books about words, has amounted to a lifetime passion. Small wonder friends joke: "Why should I go to a library when I know Ira Gershwin?"

Ira flips the FM dial on his library radio and makes a mental note when a Gershwin tune pours out, "I'm not really involved, anymore," he once remarked. "Those songs are like children. They've grown up to bave lives of their own."
